Overview

This document is the second of three primary documents intended to aid federal agency fleet managers and information systems support personnel in transitioning their systems and processes to reporting vehicle-level data (VLD). For additional information about these documents and the collection of VLD via the Federal Automotive Statistical Tool (FAST), see the Overview section of the first document, “Federal Automotive Statistical Tool Vehicle-Level Data Element Reference”. Current versions of all three documents will be available for download at <https://fastweb.inl.gov/help/index.cfm/resources/vehicle-level-data>.

This second document describes all of the business rules that are used to evaluate the validity and quality of VLD with respect to FAST. Each business rule is listed in connection with the data element to which it applies and is characterized in the following section with:

- The unique identifier of the associated data element
- The name of the associated data element
- A unique identifier for the rule, based on the identifier belonging to the associated data element
- A description of the rule, including (where applicable) lists of specific acceptable values (with those values shown in MONOSPACED TEXT)
- An indication of whether violations of the rule will “block” the entry of the data or “flag” the data. Any violation of blocking rules will prevent the data from being imported into FAST and must be resolved in the import file before any data from the file will be imported. Violations of flagging rules will not prevent data from being imported; rather, flagged data will be presented to the reporting agency as suspect and may merit further review.

Note: All data elements must be specified unless one or more business rules for an element specifically note situations in which that element may be omitted. Some data elements which may be omitted will receive a default value (noted in the rule description); readers should ensure that use of such default values is appropriate and accurate for the corresponding vehicle within their specific fleet.
